Left: Stone Dam in the Creek; whoever built this did the Rio Galisteo a favor. It slows floods and may even benefit the aquifer and household water supplies..

Right: Thunderbird petroglyph, Galisteo Basin. The vultures came late this year and there seem to be less of them around the village. Anybody know why?

NM 41 MEETING

Consultant Dave Pennington and a number of representatives from the New Mexico Department of Transportation were at the Community Center May 3rd to inform the community about the latest plans for improvement of the NM 41 Corridor. (In fact it seemed there were more officials than Galisteo community members attending.) It was clear that our voices on several issues had been heard, although designation of NM 41 as a "major collector" will not change.

Pennington Associates' recommendations (not yet DOT decisions, though they will come soon) will improve sight distance on the whole 16-mile stretch from Clark Hill to 285, where there are no shoulders and no breakdown lanes. (These would have helped in this terrible fire season, since cars are igniting grass fires.) On Clark Hill there would be 12' lanes and 6' shoulders plus a better climbing lane on the hill itself. After the Rodeo Grounds and on the San Cristobal bridge there would be 12' lanes and 4' shoulders.

The "Community Core" -- beginning at Avenida Vieja, ending ¹/₄ mile north of La Vega- would have 11' lanes, 4' shoulders, and a 30mph speed limit, with pedestrian paths on the east side of the highway and across both bridges. It was pointed out that a walkway would bring the highway awfully close to the houses in the central village. Apparently this recommendation could be altered.

Roundabouts are not recommended, but medians, or "flared roads," are recommended north of the San Cristobal bridge and just north of the village before the hogback to between Vista Clara and Goose Downs. There would be another LED sign at the Rodeo Grounds.

Both bridges are dangerous for cyclists. Bicycle advocates at the meeting were pleased to hear that there would be a four-foot bike trail (the legal minimum), intermittent rumble strips in the 55 mph zone, and friction surfaces.

Both bridges are "structurally unsound." San Cristobal is the worst and will have to be totally replaced. Although at the last meeting it seemed possible that only the deck on the Galisteo bridge would be replaced, when concrete cores from the supports were tested, 7 of the 11 broke off; the 1936 aggregate is way below what is required today; and the steel is old. So the rehabilitation option is no longer viable. ("You don't build a new house on an old foundation.")

Current options for the Galisteo Bridge include parallel bridges, keeping the old one as a walkway (as long as it is safe) and adding another one, which would require rebuilding the whole road. (It certainly seems possible to give the new bridge a similar "historical look"; parallel bridges would make a very wide and ungainly gateway to the village from the south.) A new bridge would be 19' wide (11' lane, 4' shoulder and 4' walkway on one side). The new San Cristobal bridge would be 20' wide. The load limits would be 20 tons.

Construction is tentatively set for 2012-2013 (spring 2013 for the bridges and 2015 for the roads), although funding is still uncertain. It has yet to be decided how the replacements would be accomplished – possibly by building each bridge in halves so that one lane of traffic is always open. (Adding a temporary bridge means cutting down trees and more impact on the creek.)

There will be another public hearing after environmental assessment and "agency consultation"-including the input of the State Historic Preservation Officer, the Army Corps of Engineers (which has jurisdiction over arroyos) and maybe US Fish and Wildlife, in case any endangered species are found.

PUBLIC PROCESS FOR SUSTAINABLE LAND DEVELOPMENT CODE

The Public Input Process for the Santa Fe County Sustainable Land Development Code begins with a series of meetings, including one in Galisteo, May 19th at 6:30 at the Community Center. The SLDC is the legal implementing device of the recently adopted Sustainable Growth Management Plan (SGMP) and contains detailed regulations for the development of land within the County. The success of the SLDC depends on strong public input, insuring that citizens are heard. This process is not initiated often. The original County Land Development code was passed in 1980 and updated in 1996. Development patterns and future growth locations impact everyone, city or county. The El Centro meeting on Wednesday, May 25 at the County Administration Building will be broadcast live with interactive communication at www.santafecounty.org. Residents will be able to call or email in to the meeting to voice concerns, provide input and offer recommendations. Zoning, water, traffic, pollution, trails, open space, community planning, proximity of goods and services are all dependent on this code. Subdivisions, property improvements, home businesses, procedures and fees are also covered. For more information or to sign up to receive information on the SLDC contact Melissa Holmes at (505) 995-2717. Additional information available at www.santafecounty. org by clicking on Sustainable Land Development Code under Hot Topics.

THEY SHOOT COYOTES, DON'T THEY?

Jan Saunders

Yup, they sure do. But, bring up the topic of predator control in polite conversation and you will surely hear more yips, yowls and even snarls from friends than you ever will from any selfrespecting coyote pack.

According to the website for Animal Protection of New Mexico, the USDA's Wildlife Service kills an average of 6,000 coyotes a year, even though studies show that killing coyotes to decrease populations and reduce threats to new-born cattle, deer and antelope is not only scientifically indefensible and a waste of agency resources but is opposed by the general public. A memo from the New Mexico Department of Game and Fish in 2002 reported: "The coyote control strategies employed for the past 3 years in the designated high-priority deer units have proven inconclusive at best." The memo referred to a program costing $230,000 in which 1,080 coyotes were trapped.

A recent article in The Silver City Sun in response to public outrage over a front page photo showing 5 covote skins hanging on a fence, explains "... coyotes have about the same protection as mosquitoes." Truth is it is legal to kill coyotes 24/7 anytime, day or night, no limit, no season. The truth also is that studies confirm that as the removal rate of coyotes increases, so does the rate of immigration and number of reproducing females, thereby resulting in an overall increase of coyote numbers.

As far as my own personal safety and that of my two miniature Australian Shepherds, I don't worry too much about the former and lose a lot of sleep over the latter. My haphazard research tells me that coyote attacks on people in the US and Canada are extremely rare. Most attacks have been on children under 5 years of age. Sadly, a three-year old child was killed by a coyote in California in 1980. On the other side of the canine coin, over three million children are bitten by domestic dogs every year and more than 300 people were killed by those same family dogs between 1979 and the late 1990's. Clearly small pets left unattended outside in Galisteo are fair coyote game.

And so it is that as the sun sinks behind the Ortiz Mountains. we are left with nothing more certain than the overwhelming proof of Coyote's legendary ability to survive in spite of unrelenting opposition to his very existence. In his poem, Covote, Baxter Black, cowboy poet and humorist, sums up the dilemma this way:

"So if you must describe him in terms Such as wily, and clever and keen You must also include homicidal, Sadistic, demented and mean."

 NO BURNING, NO SMOKING ESPECIALLY IN THE BOSQUE **

Cigarette butts, beer cans, and campfire circles have been found in the Bosque recently, plus a young man whose truck got stuck as he tried to drive through the creek, and other tire tracks.

Please report anything dangerous that you see to the Fire Department or to 9/11.

PEDACITOS/BITS AND PIECES

The Spanish Colonial Art Society has announced a major gift of "over 70 Mexican pieces," including tinwork and paintings on tin and copper, from former Galisteño Ralph Tingle. Famous New Mexico writer Max Evans worked as "a 12-year-old cowboy on the San Cristobal Ranch, near Galisteo," and recalls, "It's so beautiful, I still think the San Cristobal is my own ranch." (New Mexico Magazine, 2/2011.)

In March, former Galisteña Valentine McKay-Riddell had a signing at Collected Works in Santa Fe for her book The River Goddess and Other Stories.
